INTERNATIONAL TOWN / CIDADE INTERNACIONAL

Many people who immigrated to Brazil during the early 20th century and their descendants still live in Oizumi. They are mostly from Southern Brazil, especially Paraná and São Paulo. Many of them are descendants of Japanese immigrants who settled in Brazil during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Some are descendants of Chinese immigrants who came to Brazil to work in the coffee industry. Others are descendants of Italian immigrants who came to Brazil to work in the sugar cane industry. There are also many descendants of German, Polish, and other European immigrants who came to Brazil to work in the coffee industry. Today, there are over 10,000 foreign residents in Oizumi, making it one of the most diverse towns in Brazil.

The most notable town in Oizumi Prefecture, Oizumi boasts that 40% of its population is foreign. In 1990, the number of foreign residents in Oizumi reached 10,000, surpassing the number of native Japanese for the first time. Since then, the number of foreign residents has continued to grow, reaching approximately 15,000 by 2020. This is due to the fact that Oizumi has a favorable working environment for foreign workers, with many companies providing opportunities for international workers to work in Brazil. Additionally, the town has a well-developed infrastructure and a friendly government that supports foreign residents.
